Amritsar was founded in 1577 by the fourth Sikh guru, Guru Ram Das, is home to the spectacular Golden Temple, Sikhism's holiest shrine and one of India's most serene and humbling sights. The hyperactive streets surrounding the temple have been calmed to some extent by recent urban landscaping, including graceful pedestrianised walkways, but duck into any side alley and you'll soon discover Amritsar's fantastically frenetic old-city bazaars, sheltering a sensory overload of sights, sounds and smells.

The Golden Temple Amritsar, India (Sri Harimandir Sahib Amritsar) is not only a central religious place of the Sikhs, but also a symbol of human brotherhood and equality. Everybody, irrespective of cast, creed or race can seek spiritual solace and religious fulfilment without any hindrance. It also represents the distinct identity, glory and heritage of the Sikhs. Sri Harmandir Sahib, also known as Sri Darbar Sahib or Golden Temple, (on account of its scenic beauty and golden coating for English speaking world), is named after Hari (God) the temple of God.

Jallianwala Bagh is situated near the Golden Temple complex. It is the witness to the Jallianwala Bagh massacre of 1919 (or Jallianwala Bagh hatyakand, in Hindi). It is a 6.5-acre public garden which holds national importance and stands as a memorial to all those who lost their lives during the open-fire by notorious General Dyer. The walls are spotted with bullet marks and holes telling you the story of the disaster that took place, back on 13th April 1919. The park has information plaques at places to help you know the historical importance of each spot there.

JALLIANWALA BAGH

The Jallianwala Bagh memorial in Amritsar has stood for over 100 years. It serves as a solemn reminder of the harsh rule of the British in India, as well as a tragic event known as the ‘Bloodiest Baisakhi’. On April 13, 1919, British soldiers shot and killed unarmed people in Amritsar. However the renovation of the Jallianwala Bagh has led to a huge row with historians, among others, criticising the central government for “erasing history” of that brutality.

Critics say that they haven’t seen a more hideous transformation than this. As per them, worldwide experts try to maintain the texture, color and feel of historic buildings but this looks like a ‘Jhaanki’.

SITE PLAN

HISTORY OF AMRITSAR

Amritsar was founded by Sri Guru Ramdass, the fourth guru of the Sikhs in about 1574 A.D. Before the city was founded, the area was covered with thick forests and had several lakes. To start the city the Guru invited 52 traders from different sects belonging to nearby places like Patti and Kasur to settle here. These families started the first 32 shops in the city which still stand in the street called Batasi Hatta (32 shops). The Guru himself shifted to live among them in the city which came to be called Ramdasapur and has been eulogized in the Guru Granth Sahib.

The construction of Amrit Sarovar from which the city gets its present name was also started by Sri Guru Ramdass. His successor, Sri Guru Arjan Dev, completed the project and located the Harmandir Sahib in its midst. Later, when Guru Arjan Dev completed the writing of the Holy Granth Sahib a copy of Guru Granth Sahib was ceremonially installed in Harmandir Sahib. Baba Buddha Sahib was appointed the first Granthi.

After the last Guru Sri Gobind Singh Baba Banda Bahadur, a Sikh from Nanded came to Punjab and inflicted several crushing defeats on the Imperial Mughal forces. This led to the rise of the Sikh power and the rise of several "jathas or bands" called Misls. 12 Misls of the Sikh confederacy-controlled Punjab and from time to time attempted to expand their territory and resources. 4 of these Misl, namely; the Ahluwalia Before Maharaja Ranjit Singh, outer Amritsar was controlled by the Bhangi misl who built the Gobindgarh Fort. They were crushed by Maharaja Ranjit Singh early in his career.

Part of Amritsar was controlled by the Kanhaiya-Misl with whom Maharaja Ranjit Singh formed a matrimonial alliance by marrying Jai Singh infant granddaughter Mahtab Kaur when he was 6 years old himself.

Part of Amritsar was controlled by the Kanhaiya-Misl with whom Maharaja Ranjit Singh formed a matrimonial alliance by marrying Jai Singh infant granddaughter Mahtab Kaur when he was 6 years old himself.

The Ramgarhia Misl controlled the rest of Amritsar and was one of the most powerful Misls. Jassa Singh Ramgarhia was the first to fortify Amritsar. He surrounded the place with a huge mud wall calling it Ram Navami or Fort of God. It was attacked by the imperial Mughal forces but it was rebuilt by Jassa Singh who renamed the place as Ramgarh from which his misl took its name; Ramgarhia. He was a ferocious military leader and even attacked the Red Fort in New Delhi and made away with 4 guns and the endowment slab on which the Mughals were crowned and placed it within the Golden Temple Complex. During the Misal period Barracks, Bungas, Forts and Havelis were constructed as required, around the Golden Temple for use of the Sikh Army.

Maharaja Ranjit Singh brought all the Misls under his control and took over full control of Amritsar by 1802 A.D. It was he who fortified the Gobind Garh Fort on modern lines. He also built the Ram Bagh palace and garden on Mughal lines and covered the Harmandir Sahib in Gold and made it look as we see it today. Maharaja Ranjit Singh also built a huge wall with 12 gates around the city of Amritsar. Only one gate "The Ram Bagh Gate" stands till day.

HISTORY OF HARMANDIR SAHIB

Sri Harmandir Sahib, also known as The Golden Temple, is a gurdwara that can be found in the Punjab region of India's city of Amritsar. It is Sikhism's most important spiritual center and the holiest place.

Amritsar was founded by Sri Guru Ramdass ji, the fourth guru of the Sikhs in about 1574 A.D. The construction of Amrit Sarovar (pool of nectar) from which the city gets its present name was also started by Sri Guru Ramdass. His successor, Sri Guru Arjan Dev, completed the project and located the Harmandir Sahib in its midst.

The current edifice of the gurudwara dates back to the 18th century. Its construction was started in 1764 under the supervision of Sultan-e-Quam Sardar Jassa Singh and was completed in 1776.

Around half-a-century later, Maharaja Ranjit Singh renovated the gurudwara and decorated it with gold foil in 1830, which led the Harmandir Sahib to be known as the Golden Temple.

After hearing about the Golden Temple of Amritsar through Maharaja Ranjit Singh, Mir Osman Ali Khan, the then Nizam of Hyderabad started providing it with yearly grants. This custom is kept alive till date under the supervision and control of the committee of nizam of Hyderabad.

In 1984, the Golden Temple became a point of a conflict between some armed Sikh militants hiding within the premises of the holy shrine and the Indian Government. It caused much damage to the shrine. Once again, the Sikh community came together and renovated the temple.

HISTORY OF HARMANDIR SAHIB

The foundation for the shrine was laid by Sai Hazrat Mian Mir, a Sufi saint. The land for the shrine was gifted by none other than Mughal Emperor Akbar. The shrine attracts around 3 million visitors in a month.

The man-made pool on the site of the temple was completed by the fourth Sikh Guru, Guru Ram Das, in 1577. All people from all backgrounds and religions are welcome to worship at the Golden Temple. It has a square layout, four entrances, and a circumambulation pathway around the pool. The four doors to the gurudwara represent the Sikh belief in equality and the idea that everyone is welcome in their sacred space.

In 1984, the Golden Temple became a point of a conflict between some armed Sikh militants hiding within the premises of the holy shrine and the Indian Government. It caused much damage to the shrine. Once again, the Sikh community came together and renovated the temple.

The Gurdwara complex has been nominated as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in the year 2004.

The word "Harmandir" is composed of two words: "Hari", which scholars translate as "God", and "mandir", which means "house". Ian Kerr and other academics characterize the Temple as a fusion of Hindu Rajput and Indo-Islamic Mughal architecture.

HISTORY OF HARMANDIR SAHIB

The Golden Temple stands in the midst of a beautiful water body called Amritsar or Amrit Sarovar, from where the city derives its name. The shrine displays influences of different architectural styles, including the Indo-Islamic Mughal architecture and the Hindu Rajput architecture. It is a two-storied structure. While the lower level of the shrine is built out of marble, the upper level is covered in gold panels. A 750 kg gold gilded dome sits at the top of this structure. Even the doors of the shrine are covered in gold foil.

WHAT ARE YOU?

It's getting louder day by day,
It's getting closer every day.
It may get me in my sleep when I lay,
Or maybe when I sip my tea in a crowded cafe.

It's volume pierces my ears,
It shines light on all my fears,
Making them crystal clear.
All the obstacles i thought I passed, they reappear.

No body, no face,
Yet just thinking about it leaves me dazed.
No tongue no voice, but I still hear it ever
night,
I try to fight it but it comes back stronger
every time.

No, I'm not crazy,
I'd try to make you understand, but it's not that easy.

Maybe I'll start by giving you a little hint,
Throw a little light on what "it" is and shine
on it a glint.

"It" is a friend of mine,
I found him in the darkness of endless time.
You'll find him too when you sit alone in
your room,
Maybe when you're full of despair and you wait for your doom.

You're curious about "its" name?
Wondering about its origin and from where it came?

"It" is simply also known as "silence".
Yes it makes you lifeless, but at least it fills the ever so often felt absence.

LITERARY CLUB

READERS

The day was as busy and hot as it could get. Having absolute no reason other than a relieving forty minutes of the soothing air-conditioner breeze, I headed towards my school library for my library period. Grabbing the seat right below the air conditioner I settled in, stretching out my legs. After a good five minutes of letting myself loose into my surroundings, I was brought back to reality by the librarian asking me to do the but obvious that a person is supposed to do in a library, READ. With a dwindled interest I marched towards the fiction aisle and chose 'Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone', the sole reason being its intriguing cover page. With no option left behind to recuperate back the relaxation I'd just lost, I ended up reading the first page, then the second, then the third and flipped the page to number 23 when the bell rang, startling me with its bumming noise and my new found soul interest. READING. That's how I, being an eleven year old started to read and don't picture myself stopping, ever.

People as "Readers" are considered boring, introverts, delusional and what not. What they don't understand is, we as readers are not at all boring cause we're never living a single life. We live a new life of a new character with every book we read and a part of that character stays with us and shines through our personalities. We're not at all introverts cause in one book we're the vice president of Goldman Sachs Bank in Hong Kong as Radhika Mehta from 'One Indian Girl' by Chetan Bhagat, while in the other we're a flower shop owner as Lily Bloom from 'It Ends with Us' by 'Colleen Hoover'. Coming to being delusional, well maybe, yes we're;). The inquisitiveness brought to us by those silent books resting on the shelves of a book store is as deep as the Pacific ocean. We as readers have already lived some dozens of lives and are willing to live a thousand more of them.

'Reading is to the soul what relaxes the body and the mind', are some true words cause the biggest escape for a reader from the world is the book in their hand .

Not only reading helps us feel calm but it kind of probes our mind and excavates what has been towing us down from a certain amount of time. Books are like dwelling places for readers, they protect them and they surround themselves with books, their silence does not demand anything, they exist, they are alive, they are for anyone to open, unlike us human beings. That's something I'll end up cherishing about books for forever and beyond. They'll always act as a reminder to me that there is no harm in always giving, on the contrary the person would only end up adoring you even more, that even if you fall and have no one by your side to pick you up, you'll still have yourself and that'll always end up being more than sufficient.

They'll always act as a reminder that there's no soul the grandeur of this universe has ever constructed which will lie witnessing the phenomenon of reading being partial towards it. Now if that isn't magic to you, I don't know what else is.
