Report of the Workshop on the theme of 'First Aid in Emergencies' organized by Department of Commerce

The Department of Commerce at Integral University, Lucknow organized a one-day workshop on the theme of 'First Aid in Emergencies' which was conducted by Dr Annapurna C Reddy, Deputy Nursing superintendent, IIMSR, Integral University who along with her assistant gave a hands on training to the audience including students and faculty members to how to respond in situation of emergency. She demonstrated the procedures of CPR, first aid in case of accidents, snake bites, burn etc. and stressed that one should stay calm and steady in their response towards the emergent situations.

Prof (Dr) Adeel Maqbool, Vice-Dean, Faculty of Commerce while welcoming the expert applauded the efforts of the organizers and said that it's a life skill which we all should know, he informed that government has mandated it for educational institutions to impart these life skill trainings to students to sensitize them. He further said that our awareness regarding response in first aid emergencies can save many precious lives and appealed to everyone to remain vigilant in their response towards medical emergencies.

The workshop was moderated by Dr Mansoor Ilahi who earlier apprised the audience about the theme of the workshop, while the vote of thanks was proposed by DQAC coordinator of the Department Dr Farhina Sardar Khan who expressed her gratitude to the guest speaker. The workshop was coordinated by Ms Amisha Srivastava who played an instrumental role in organizing the workshop.

Philosophy of First Aid

- In the pre-hospital setting, the key contributors to survival and recovery from illness and injury are prompt and effective maintenance of the body's primary functions:

1. Airway
2. Breathing
3. Circulation

4. Blood Pressure Control (life threatening)
