EU Publishers File Antitrust Complaint Over Google's AI Summaries

Independent EU publishers, led by the Independent Publishers Alliance, lodged an antitrust complaint accusing Google of using its Al-generated "Al Overviews" to steal traffic from news sites. Analytics firm SimilarWeb reports that 37 of the top 50 U.S. news websites experienced traffic declines, with zero-click searches reaching 69% in May 2025. The coalition is urging the European Commission to impose interim restrictions and push for reforms to safeguard original journalismclaiming potential copyright violations. Google counters that these summaries drive new opportunities for publishers.

UK Demands Overhaul of Alan Turing Institute

UK Technology Secretary Peter Kyle urged a restructuring of the Alan Turing Institute to better align with national security and defence needs. A recent £100 million funding round triggered scrutiny, with critics warning that a defence-first focus may undermine the institute's impartial academic mission. ATI leaders have stated willingness to collaborate with government priorities.

Tech Earnings Season Spotlight: AI Investments

As Q2 earnings season approaches, analysts focus on Al-related investments. Firms like Meta and Alphabet are spending an estimated $64-75 billion on infrastructure. Despite geopolitical and tariff headwinds, robust demand for AI compute, especially in memory chips (e.g., Micron), is expected to buoy performance. However, regulators and investors await proof of long-term ROI.
