Gender equality entails ensuring that the rights, responsibilities, and opportunities of individuals are not contingent upon their gender, abilities, age, ethnicity, or geographical background. The roles of men and women in existing societies and institutions are generally different, leading to varying needs. Practical needs arise from the actual conditions experienced by women and men due to the gender roles assigned to them in society.

With this vision in mind, Department of Physics, Integral University organized a Nukkad Natak titled "Equal Voices, Equal Choices" on April 03, 2024, in front of Academic Block-D at 12:00 noon. This engaging street play was focused to spark conversations and promote understanding towards achieving Sustainable Development Goal 5. A group of 10 students played a Nukkad Natak towards Gender equality. The events commenced with an informative briefing by the Dean, Students' Welfare, Professor, Monowar Alam Khalid, who addressed the participants and emphasized the urgency of taking proactive steps towards the need of this event. He highlighted the integral role played by the women in society.

The event was open to all the students of Integral University. This event was attended by 30 undergraduate and postgraduate students. In this event, Head of the Physics department and faculty members were also present.

The event ended with a lively group photo session, capturing the joys and companionship of the participants. Notably, students showed very keen interest in the event. The event was highly successful and contributed to greater awareness and interest about importance of Gender equality for a successful social life and society.

Some Glimpses of the Event:
