Course Code	HP401	Title of the Course	International Relations: Theories & Concepts	L	4	T	0	P	0	C	4
Year	I	Semesters	I
Prerequisite	Graduate (Any Stream)	Co-requisite	None
Course Objectives	This course is an introduction to International Relations theory. Theories provide interpretative frameworks for understanding what is happening in the world. These frameworks allow us to focus on factors essential in organizing our thinking about international relations. Each theory makes a series of assumptions to make sense of the complexity of international politics. This course surveys both the mainstream and alternate approaches to the discipline, examining how these theories conceptualize the international 'as a field of study. The diverse traditions of theoretical perspectives have been categorized under the positivist or the scientific approaches and the post-positivist and reflectivist approaches. These major theoretical traditions link up with each other and structure the discipline of International Relations. The course would also expose the students to approaches that think about International Relations theory differently. The course aims to enable students to assess the contributions and shortcomings of both mainstream and alternate International Relations theories. It hopes to inculcate in students skills and provide them the intellectual tools to develop the ability to examine international events and processes.

Course Outcomes
CO1	To explore International Relations as discipline by theories and approaches.
CO2	To understand the history of IR from 1914-1945.
CO3	To understand the history of IR from 1945-1990
